In this episode, the story of SpongeBob's western ancestor, SpongeBob discovers that Patrick has a great-great-uncle named Patrick Revere, who warned Bikini Bottom that man-eating mollusks are coming, but no one listened to him. Mr. Krabs tells the two of his great-great-grandpappy Krabs, who invented a painful security invention that hurts the fingers of anyone who touches the booby-trapped dollar bill. While walking, SpongeBob runs into Sandy, who reveals that she has a relative named Rosie Cheeks, who was the first squirrel to discover oil in Texas. Feeling sorry for SpongeBob, Sandy takes him to the library to "dig around his family tree." SpongeBob learns that he is the great-great the story of SpongeBuck SquarePants. SpongeBuck arrived at a town named Dead Eye Gulch and goes to a theater/saloon named Krusty Kantina. Dead Eye Plankton's rule of tyranny. SpongeBuck got to be a Sheriff by Pappy Krabs (Mr. Krabs' ancestor) even though he just wanted to be a fry cook. But then, a villain named Dead Eye Plankton (Plankton's ancestor) arrived there and SpongeBuck got kicked away, and Pecos Patrick Star (Patrick's ancestor) met him. SpongeBuck got a nickname for him, and it was Idiot Friend. Pecos Patrick told him to defeat Dead Eye Plankton by smacking him several times. When they get back to town (via a giant cactus that made SpongeBuck and Pecos Patrick jump so high that they landed in Dead Eye Plankton, and the two walked towards each other as though it was a Western duel. However, the fight ended very quickly, as SpongeBuck stepped on Dead Eve Plankton. Pappy Krabs also tried stomping on him, and he decided to set up a business where the townsfolk could squish Dead Eve. Polene Puff (Mrs. Puff's ancestor) was first in line to crush him. All the residents of Bikini Gulch built a golden statue of SpongeBuck (Squidward's ancestor liked his design better, which was him as a muscular man), and Pappy Krabs, Hopalong Squidward's ancestor), Pecos Patrick, and Polene Puff holding SpongeBob is amazed by his ancestor's actions, but wonders whatever happened to his statue, as it seemed way better than the current one. SpongeBob soon realizes that the statue is really covered in jellyfish feces, hence the statue's different look. He cleans it up by scrubbing himself all across it, which disgusts Sandy, who wonders about SpongeBob's intelligence before he shows her the statue of his ancestor and she realizes his reasons. SpongeBob then sees the golden statue of his ancestor, SpongeBob and Sandy walk away, while SpongeBob is saying that maybe someday, people will know the name SpongeBob SquarePants, as the episode ends. Then, in the epilogue, SpongeBuck and Pecos Patrick sing a song called "Idiot Friends." Reception Trivia General This episode was originally called "The Pest of the West." There is a book based on this episode, which took five years to be released after this episode premiered. In one of the Burger King commercials about kids' meal toys based on this special, a 7-second animation was shown with SpongeBuck and Pecos Patrick trying to ride seahorses. The Bikini Bottom Library reappears in this episode. It first appeared in "Mid-Life Crustacean," albeit only its interior having an appearance, which makes this the only episode in the series to show the exterior of the library. Two clips were used for the 2007 Nick Rewind.[8] The pages of Family Histories of Bikini Bottom book is not written in English or, at least, does not appear to be, but Sandy could still read it. Sometimes, it is written with Cvrillic Alphabets (Russian language). Many vears before, in "Dunces and Dragons," Bikini Bottom was a very large kingdom. Here, it is a small village, and in most episodes, it is an average city. Also, in "SB-129," it is a large prehistoric jungle. Years later, Bikini Bottom in "Ugh," it is very similar. Overall, Bikini Bottom's size and location changes several times along with the population. Dead Eye Gulch was called "Bikini Gulch" before being attacked by Dead Eye. Both of Patrick's ancestors in this episode are shown warning their town or what it was during their era that something is coming to town. Nat Peterson has two ancestors shown in this episode: one who appears in a flashback where Patrick's ancestor, Patrick Revere, warns Bikini Bottom of the mollusks and the other while SpongeBuck entered the Krusty Kantina, his western ancestor is seen at a faraway corner from the counter. Later, when SpongeBuck approaches the counter, Nat's ancestor is seen at a near the center of the cantina. Hopalong calls SpongeBuck a "yokel," which is a derogatory term for someone from a poor country or the rural areas. The word "idiot" is prominent in this episode. According to the SpongeBob's Greatest Hits CD booklet, it is said seventeen times. It is used in the featured song "Idiot Friends." However, it is actually only said sixteen times. Also in Indonesian version, the epilogue song was cut because "idiot" word is considered as profanity in Indonesia. It is hard to hear, but at the very end of the song "Idiot Friends," about a quarter of a second before the episode ends, a fish can be heard yelling "Help me!" really fast. Archetypal Western references: Town is strikingly close to a railroad/railway. "High noon" is a term used in the frontier to refer to the time of day which the sun was at its peak and usually deviated from true noon, though not by much). Newcomer named Sheriff in a haste. Tyrant bandit. This is the first episode to use Wacom Cintigs for drawings instead of pencils.[9] The shift to Wacom Cintiqs lets the designers and animators draw on a computer screen and make immediate changes or undo mistakes. This is the second episode to have two places in one spot, the instance being Dead Eye Funeral Parlor and Ice Cream Parlor. The first is "The Sponge Who Could Fly," the instance being Don's Import Store & Delicatessen. This is the second double-length special of season 5. The first is the season debut episode to use the opening scene where Patchy the Pirate says, "Ahoy, it's a SpongeBob SquarePants special." The first was "Have You Seen This Snail?" This is the last episode to use the static Nickelodeon splat logo or a black background in the end credits. Every episode after this uses either the light bulb logo or some other variant of the Next Showdown! Description on the SpongeBob's Pest of the West DVD. This episode takes place in 1882 because it reads "around 1882" on the back of the West DVD. For unknown reasons, this episode was rated 13+ on Amazon Prime Video in August 2020. This has since been corrected as of October 2020, and the episode is back to being rated its original TV-Y7 rating on Amazon Prime Video. Cultural references Patrick Revere and the mollusks are a reference to Paul Revere and the mollusks being the British or as he called the regulars. The Dead Eye Gulch flashback story is similar to most wild west movies, especially the duel part. When Sandy says, "That boy ain't right" from the TV series King of the Hill. The number of generations from SpongeBuck to Sponge Adam to Noah. This episode has scenes from the 1993 TV series, Walker, Texas Ranger, and the 1994 TV series, Renegade. The Idiot Friends tune is taken from "She'll Be Coming 'Round the Mountain." Errors No train tracks to be found. After SpongeBuck leaves the train near Dead Eye Gulch, it and its tracks do not appear for the rest of the episode. When SpongeBuck has ice cream, he walks to the Krusty Kantina. But when he walks inside, his ice cream disappears. When SpongeBuck finishes drinking his milk the first time, one of his white teeth turns yellow for a second. After SpongeBuck states to Dead Eye Plankton, "Hey, that's not your money," the former's eyelashes disappear. Nat's half miscolored body in one of the many frames where SpongeBuck's teeth are yellow while he's riding his coffin. During the scene where SpongeBuck is riding his coffin inside of the Krusty Kantina, the darker part of Nat's body that appears above his bandana is colored the same as the rest of his body. Throughout the whole scene as mentioned above, SpongeBuck's teeth color changes to yellow for a few frames multiple times. This is likely due to the animators having to animate SpongeBuck hopping up and down in his coffin and him talking at the same time, making it harder to correctly add color to his model. SpongeBuck's black cowboy boots in this episode, when he shows up for the showdown at high noon, and stay like that for the remainder of the episode. When SpongeBuck and Dead Eye walk towards each other, they were a few feet away from each other, but in the next clip, they were still walking without reaching each other. Towards the end of the episode, when Sandy tells Gulch are constantly changing. The Krusty Kantina and the Bank are mostly the same, but some buildings change color throughout the episode. Also, the names of the stores keep changing, too. For example, the "Dead Eye General Store" turned into "Dead Eye Boots." The number of buildings also seem to change. Many sound effects and dialogue are out of sync with the graphics. When Pecos Patrick says, "Oh, hey SpongeBuck!" in the Russian dub, he is called SpongeBob instead. On a November 30, 2011 airing of this episode, the United Plankton Pictures, Inc. logo was replaced with the Rainbow S.r.l. logo that was seen on Winx Club. On the Nicktoons version, the full episode is in wide-screen format despite not being a wide-screen episode.
